AFTER risking supreme sacrifice in exploding a planatomic bomb right in the face of the sun, International Rescue astronauts have found themselves up against fresh and equally horrific danger. Its motors out of action, Thunderbird 3 was blown across space by the blast, and forced to make an emergency landing on the unexplorable Magnax Continent of Planet Venus. There is little hope of survival amid the network of sulphur lakes, the domain of the most savage and destructive mutations known to the universe . . .

Venus Monster Pounds TB3

IN a desperate bid to rescue spacecraft Thunderbird 3, marooned on the sulphur-lake continent Magnax of Planet Venus, and at the mercy of one of the incredible space-monsters inhabiting the area, International Rescue have modified Thunderbird 1 for space flight.

The only hope for the trapped men is that Q-scale high productivity isotopes re-fuelling Thunderbird 1's reactor will enable the craft to complete the journey . . . and in time. Without the actual presence of Professor Horatio 'Brains' Hackenbacker—he is one of the crew trapped on Venus—International Rescue is taking its biggest gamble yet . . . the possible loss of both ships and half the organisation's effective personnel.

WHERE is TB 3? This is the last dramatic picture to be released of the International Rescue spacecraft, taken by long-range micro-scanner as the ship plummeted out of control towards the cloud-shrouded planet Venus.

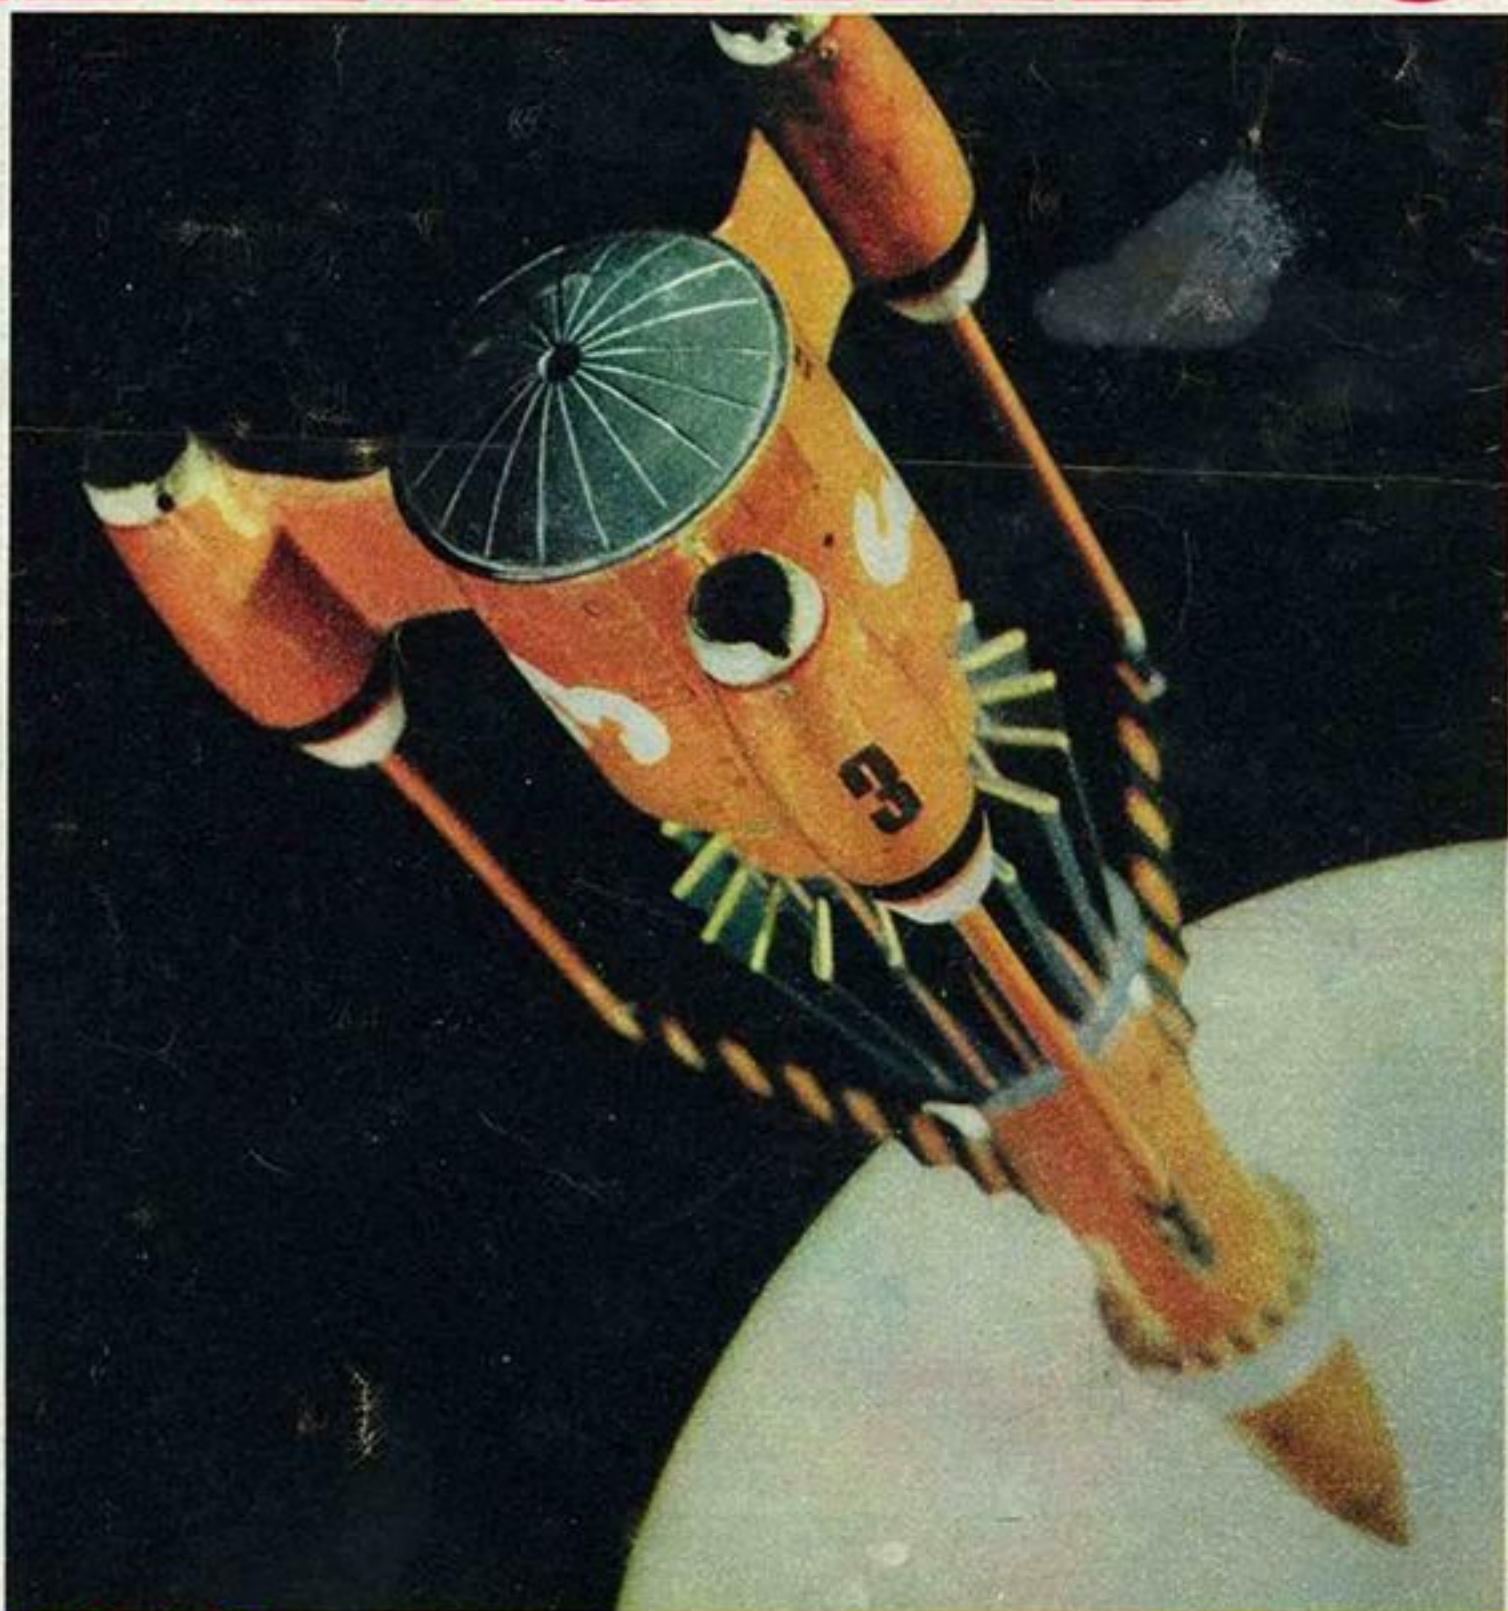

Since Thunderbird 3 made its semi-controlled splashdown in one of the monster-infested sulphur lakes on the Magnax continent, radio contact has been blurred and intermittent. It is believed that the International Rescue astronauts aboard are in grave danger, not only from the gigantic Venusian lake-creatures, but also from stress fractures sustained by the hull of their craft.

Meanwhile, Thunderbird 1, modified for deep-space penetration, continues its desperate race to the danger zone . . . See pages 10 & 11.

DEATH-LAKE TERROR

New threat on nightmare planet

UNIVERSE EDITION 93 DATELINE: October 29, 2066

EVERY second brings increasing danger to International Rescue astronauts Alan Tracy and Professor Horatio 'Brains' Hackenbacker, marooned in the sulphur lake wilderness of the Magnax Continent, Venus.

The lake is swarming with gigantic monsters of a size and ferocity unequalled throughout the solar system. One such creature has already split the hull of Thunderbird 3.

Now, while the two men struggle to effect repairs to their ship, another monster has moved in to the attack...

TROY TEMPEST relieved of command

ON her way to take part in the Norman Invasion Millenium celebrations at Hastings, England, Stingray has become a jinxed ship. First, there was the narrowly-avoided collision in the Rosario Tunnel, during which Captain Tempest appeared to faint. Then the collapse of a storage support in the missile compartment.

And now, deliberate demolition of the radio, and of equipment belonging to the World TV camera unit travelling aboard. Amazingly, the evidence points to Troy Tempest himself being the mysterious saboteur! In view of the situation, Lieutenant "Phones" Sheridan has been forced to remove Captain Tempest from command.

Latest report from Styracian leader Marshal Golgath indicates radio contact broken with XL5. This could mean that Colonel Zodiac has taken his ship down to the molten, fire-and-lava surfaced planet.

Volkanos, previously believed to be uninhabited, has proved to be the home of a race of beings created from living fire. If XL5 has indeed landed, then Steve Zodiac and his colleagues must be in the gravest danger.

Lady Penelope races to foil The Hood's last sabotage bid

GLENN FIELD Spaceport, Monday.
Countdown on Zero X, the huge craft destined to take man on his first journey to Mars, continued uninterrupted today, despite the discovery of a highly-skilled sabotage attempt.

The saboteur, known to be arch-criminal The Hood, was located by International Rescue agents before he could do any material damage to Zero X.

Although the Hood was able to make his escape, Lady Penelope's Rolls Royce, FAB 1, gave chase. Her final report indicated complete destruction of the man branded 'Public Enemy Number One.'

Crew trapped as Zero X dives to destruction

Life on Mars—the first radio pictures

SOLAR EXPLORATION CENTRE, Glenn Field: Amazing pictures transmitted direct from Mars by ultra-frequency sonar link, have been released to settle the controversial question once and for all. There is life on the red planet. No information regarding the structure of these strange life-forms has so far been received, but Doctor Ray Pierce, senior scientist with the Martian Exploration Mission, states they are hostile, and capable of emitting high-temperature fire.

Doctor Pierce is one of the men trapped aboard Zero X.

HARD on the heels of a miraculous escape by Zero X astronauts from perils encountered during man's first landing on Mars comes news of ultimate disaster.

It is understood that mechanical failure of the rearward lifting body fouled re-entry procedures as the massive space craft returned to earth's atmosphere. Unable to make even a forced landing, the ship is on unalterable crash-course. The strike-point has been computer calculated as the township of Craigsville (population 4,800).

Further, electrical damage is believed to have affected the escape unit, and the three man crew and two scientists aboard are unable to eject.

International Rescue machines are on their way in a desperate bid to save the trapped men, Thunderbird I having already taken up control station at Glenn Field, but official sources hold out little hope of success.
